KEY PILLARS OF PACKARD

Niraj Mehta
Managing Director

Niraj's journey began in London, where he earned his MSc in International Business and developed a global perspective on trade, innovation, and market behavior. But it was his return to India and the ground realities of pharmaceutical manufacturing that gave shape to a much larger mission. With hands-on experience in managing operations, understanding regulatory landscapes and building client relationships, Niraj saw a clear gap in the market: the need for a reliable, agile partner who could offer more than just products, someone who could deliver insight, consistency and true value.

From international exhibitions to everyday operations, he has led Packard with a clear ethos: quality without compromise, service with substance. His leadership is rooted with purpose, to build a company that doesn't just keep up with the global industry, but helps shape it.

Kaulish Mehta
Director

Kaulish's path was shaped by precision and process. A Computer Engineer with an MBA and formal training in GMP practices, he brings discipline and depth to every decision. Before co-founding Packard, he helped scale his family's fashion accessories business, learning firsthand the power of detail, trust and customer-centricity.

At Packard, Kaulish is the force behind the scenes, personally driving sourcing strategies, pricing models, and quality assurance protocols. His leadership style is lean, responsive and grounded in one simple belief: business should be honest, efficient and human. Whether it's a first conversation or a long-term engagement, Kaulish ensures that every client interaction reflects clarity, care and commitment.
