An anatomical illustration of a human torso, focusing on the cardiovascular system. The heart is depicted as a bright, glowing yellow-orange organ, centrally located within the chest. A complex network of blood vessels, including the aorta and pulmonary arteries, branches out from the heart, also glowing with a warm, orange-red light. The surrounding musculature and skin are rendered in a translucent blue, allowing the internal organs to be clearly visible. A thick, curved orange line sweeps across the right side of the image, adding a dynamic, modern feel to the composition. The overall lighting is soft, with a gradient from deep blue at the edges to a warmer glow around the heart.
